We have recently made two visits to the vine yards of Dr. McDonnald, and our correspondent, Mr. DeCaradeac. We have inquired minutely into their systems of planting and culture—we have examined their soils, locations and aspects have eaten their grapes, and drank their wines, of various flavors and qualities-but all pure, invigorating, and vastly superior to the foreign trash for which we pay so dearly. We have, (so far as our brief time would permit,) familiarized ourselves with their processes for making these wines, and with all the advantages and disadvantages of the business; and the result is, a deliberate conviction that the Field Culture of the Grape, as practised by these gentlemen, is of rural industry, and destined in a very few the operation. tance to the South. There are thousands of either cotton or corn, that will pay from $200 to $500 per acre in wine, the third or fourth year from planting, and which, if properly managed, may be made to clear expenses from the very outset. Much of this land can be purchased for a mere trifle, (five to ten dollars per acre,) and if it will pay even two hundred dollars per acre in wine, after the third year, what other

In fact, the testimony of both the gentlemen above alluded to, (who have had sixteen years experience,) as well as the recent successes of Mr. Axt, and many others, justifies us in claiming for the Culture of the Grape far more attention than it has ever yet received in the South, and of earnestly urging it upon the notice of

We can fully endorse, from our own knowledge, all the statements of Mr. DeCaradeuc, and com-mend his article to the special attention of our readers. We do not claim perfection for his system—nor does Mr. C. himself—but we do contend that it is the cheapest, easiest, and surest way of profitably cultivating the Vine, yet offered to the public.

GRAPE GROWING AND WINE MAKING MADE BASY. EDITORS SOUTHERN CULTIVATOR-Agreeably to your request, I now hand you a few remarks about our method of planting out and taking care of a Vineyard. I say, "our method," for I claim it as peculiar to Dr. McDonnald and myself; and we have adopted it, not through ignorance of more complicated and more costly methods, but, first, on account of its simplicity tered out of it, not only by the mystery and difficulties which have heretofore, been connected with the business, but, also, by fear of the money which is to come out of their pockets before they receive any returns. First, so many hundred dollars for trenching, and grubbing, and manuring; then so many more for vines; then so many, more to learn how to stick the cuttings into the ground; and then so many more to learn how to prune; then to learn how to make the wine, how to keep it, etc; and, to erown it all, so many thousands for a cellar. And, if it so happens, he is able and willing to stand all this, a hundred to one, he is frightened half out of his senses, and gives up in despair of ever being able to unravel the mystery, and master the awful science of, Wine making, especially if he happens to hear of "granite labora-tories" being built for the express purpose of imparting instruction for a remuneration! PREPARATION OF THE LAND.

I prefer new land,—such as would bring from four to six bushels of corn to the acre; select, if the best, although dry clay hill sides will answer terry well. Clear the land and break it up with purpose, and close the burgs tightly. Be very plows, as for corn; but all trees must, of course, be ent down and removed. Now get a parcel of small stakes, from three to four feet long, and proceed to mark out the rows; if the land be level let the rows be straight; but if on a kin part of the land be level let the rows be straight; but if on a kin part of the land be level let the rows be straight; but if on a kin part of the land be level let the rows be straight; but if on a kin part of the land be level let the rows be straight; but if on a kin part of the land be level let the rows be straight; but if on a kin part of the land be level let the rows be straight; but if on a kin part of the land be level let the rows be straight; but if on a kin part of the land be level let the rows be straight; but if on a kin part of the land let let the rows be straight; but if on a kin part of the land let let the rows be straight; but if on a kin part of the land let let the rows be straight; but if on a kin part of the land let let the rows be straight; but if on a kin part of the land let let the rows be straight; but if on a kin part of the land let let the rows be straight; but if on a kin part of the land let let the rows be straight; but if on a kin part of the land let let the rows be straight; but if on a kin part of the land let let the rows be straight; but if on a kin part of the land let let the rows be straight; but if on a kin part of the land let let the rows be straight; but if on a kin part of the land let let the rows be straight.

There were the straight to one the store of the same of possible, a piece on easterly, southeasterly exside, lay them off horizontally, or level without regard to straightness; this is in order to prevent the washing away of the soil, (see one of the late numbers of the Culticator for a simple

I prefer that distance on account of driving carts between to haul stakes, or minure, when it becomes necessary, or in vintage time. Having staked off the rows to your satisfaction, proceed to open the trenches or disches; let them be about two feet wide, and leveling instrument.) I make my rows eight or from fourteen inches deep, large plows followed by long shovels, will very quickly do the work in sandy soil. The next thing is to plant; this can be done, in our Southern climate, from the planting and pruning to the bottling of middle of November to the end of March. I prefer rooted plants; others give the preference to cuttings; the first will save you one year, and you can plant them deeper, which is a great object. Make yourself a wooden compass, with an opening of four-feet six inches at the points, and mark out the distance for your viacs in the places, and proceed to plant them. They are taily as intelligent as the pendantry of Europe, and much more to be dependent upon. Here we have another decided advantage over the Western folks, who are dependent upon the caprices of foreign laborers, and many are the airs they put on when they came to this country!

By following the rooted directions, which I have endeavoired to give in such a manner as to be within the understanding of all any making face. Put a short stake to each vine, to mark its place. There is nothing more to do until then work them as you would corn or hues and of all flavors.

FIRST PRUNING. In the winter, at any time between the 1st of December and the 15th of March, take a sharp knife; remove every branch except one, and cut that down above the second or third eye of the last growth; break the land with a half-shovel plow as for corn, passing the nearest furrow about twelve inches from the vines. Give them a stake about four feet long; they will, in the spring, shoot out many suckers, and put out eyes where they have no business; cut out the suck-ers within long handled chissel, and rub off all the cyes excepting the two or three you left in pruning; these, as they grow up, should be festened to the stakes, with bits of soft string, bark, or any thing else you may have at hand. Keep the land cultivated with plow and hoe, and plant peas between.

Like very many others, we heretofore been deterred from entering largely into the Culture of the Vine, by tear of the expense and difficulty attending it. We have been taught to look upon the production of good Wine in the South, as exceedingly problematical. No one doubted the capacity of our sunny clime for the growth of the grape; "but"—the making of good wine afterwards—the "but"—the making of good wine g of good wine afterwards there lay the difficulty will most generally stop at always upwards, will most generally stop at always upwards, will most generally stop at the eyes on the upper part of the arch, and develope them strongly; and those below will put out very weakly, or not at all. While, when the cane is laid horizontally, they all get their share much more equally divided. The vine should also be strongly fastened to the large stake. All who plant vines must plant out Osier Willow, whose twigs are superior to any others for tying, although I have made use of the young twigs of Black Gum, or of the Wild Willow, and of the bark of young Hickory. During this summer, the vines will throw out strong branches, which must be fastened to the stakes as they grow, until they reach the top, when they may be left to hang over. Plow and hoe as usual; plow deep in winter and in summer make use of a scraper. After this, the winter pruning is always, more or less, a repetition of this last; one spur, and one or two bear ing canes, accurding to the strength of the vine In pruning let the cut be clean and close, leaving no small ends of dead wood, which will surely injure the old stem. Among old vines, one of the surest and most remunerative branches a small-toothed butcher-saw will greatly assist years to become of great and significant impor- I do not approve of summer pruning; vines and fruit require all the shelter they can muster acres of uplands all around us, too poor for to preserve them from our burning sun. Person engaged in the grape culture should not lose sight of pruning; it is to moderate and equalize the production of fruit, thereby improving its quality, and sparing the health and life of the We are often told that this or that person vine. has a vine, which is never pruned, climbs to the summit of high trees, bears abundantly, is very old, etc. A single vine is very different fro field crop now cultivated in the South can begin | twelve hundred to the acre!-and in many parts to compare with it? The experience of the of Italy, where they have adopted the tree culwinters in Ohio, shows an average yield of four ture, the quality of the wine, which formerly hundred gallons so the acre, and that we can ranked high, has completely been destroyed.

never wish to see my vines average more than from twelve to fifteen bunches each. Quality is better than quantity. The Catawba seems to have usurped the most prominent place among the natives. At the West it is by far the greatest favorite; perhaps, there others do not succeed as well. At the South, most persons are following in the wake of our Western brethren, and have taken it for granted that none others are worth cultivating and condemn without a trial, or even without knowing them. The Catawba is certainly a beautiful looking grape, and a great bearer; but its housed and wild musky flavor, (which is unfortunately too strongly retained in the wine,) is a very serious objection for a palate accustomed to a more delicate fruit or beverage. The "boquet," or perfume; of wine is a precious quality, but this has "too much of the good thing."

Foreign grapes must be discarded for wine making. After a fair trial, we, like many others, have come to the conclusion that they cannot stand our climate. Of all the natives that have come within my the Catawba, subject to the rot. The former makes a delicate wine of the color of Madeira, but not so strong; the latter, a light beautiful colored Claret, very similar to Bordeaux wines. and cheapness, and then, having well succeeded. colored Claret, very similar to Bordeaux wines. Why should we alter our course? I do not pretend to say it is the best, nor do I wish to deter Black July, (both misnamed,)—the first being the best table grape we have in this country, and Black July makes a very dark, rich, red wine, not unlike Port. These two vines are not great bearers, but their fruit does not bet.

My process for making wine is different from that followed in the West and in Georgia. The grapes being gathered, and all ansound or green perries removed, they are thrown into large tubs, or half barrels, and thoroughly crushed with the hand; the contents are then emptied into large vats, (hogsheads,) which are filled to within fourteen inches of the top; cover these with homespun and boards, to keep out gnats and flies. In a very short time fermentation commences; the mass swells and rises to the ton, and should be pressed down, with a wooden pad dle, two or three times per day. The next morning the clear juice is drawn from a fascet, near the bottom, and poured into a barrel; when no more juice comes out, the mass in the vat is then carried to the press and what liquid remains in it is squeezed out; this is usually very thick, and is put into another barrel, as it is of inferior quality. Be sure that your barrels are filled to within three inches of the bung; less than that would leave too much air in contact with the wine, and would cause it to sour; more than barrels in order to clarify it. The dark Claret is cotton. You may plant two rows of corn or peas between the rows, and they will not interfere with the vines in the least.

I should state that Dr. McDonnald's mode of planting vines is more simple than mine. He makes no ditches, but only holes, about sixteen inches in diameter and eighteen deep, and plants the cuttings in these. His vines are remarkably fine, as all who see them can testify. Ditches require more labor at first, but then there is the sdvantage of having that part of your land broken which the plow cannot afterwards reach.
